NEWSPAPER HISTORY The Rockland Gazette was established in 1846. In 1874 the Courier was established, and consolidated with the Gazette in 1882. The Free Press was established in 1885, and in 1893 changed its name to the Tribune. These papers consolidated March 17, 1897.

"Remember that if opportunity for great deeds should never come, opportunity for good deeds is renewed for us day by day. The thing to long for is goodness, not glory."

It would take 2890 officers and 72,251 men to man the United States fleet if it were to be placed on a war footing. These figures do not include officers and men detached for various forms of shore duty.

To stop a 10,000 ton battleship going at full speed within her own length is the problem which the Navy Department has set for a certain Canadian inventor. He has an arrangement like a barn door on the sides of a ship which he guarantees to fulfill this function. The department has authorized a trial of the device on the battleship Indiana off the Delaware Capes, the cost to be defrayed by the inventor.

Phenomenal has been the increase in the past 30 years in the value of the wealth produced on farms in the United States. Figures carefully prepared by the statisticians of the department of agriculture show this increase to have been $2,000,000,000 in the period from 1889 to the close of last year. In 1889 the value of the wealth produced on farms of the United States was $2,460,000,000 and 10 years later it was $4,761,000,000 and last year according to the preliminary estimate just issued was $5,760,000,000.

"Ten years hence to be the father of 10 or 15 children will be as much of a disgrace as being a confirmed drunkard is at present." So spoke Mrs. Loretta Helen Baker of Spokane, Wash., at the national suffragists' convention in Washington, last week. "Roosevelt, poor ignorant man," she continued, "urges large families, but I tell you it is quality we want in children, not quantity. Woman suffrage will better children, for it will produce better thinking. It is the mental, not the physical, that rules progressive action today and teaches us that the greatest crime of the ages is too many children."

President Taft, the first chief executive of the nation ever to greet a convention of woman suffragists, braved the danger, Thursday night, of facing an army of women who want the ballot, had the courage to confess his opinion and was misled. President Taft stood unmoved on the platform during the demonstration of how for the hissing continued, but a moment—and then, smilingly answered the unfavorable greeting with this remark: "Now my dear ladies, you must show yourselves capable of suffrage by exercising that degree of restraint which is necessary in the conduct of government affairs by not hissing." The women who had hissed were rebuked. The President's reply apparently took instant effect.

"INSIDER" Vs. "OUTSIDER"

The Latter Is Advised to Get Down from "The Seat of the Scornful."

Happening to be one of those "near press agents" so severely arraigned by "Outsider" in The Courier-Gazette of April 12, I tried to weep over the rebuke, but I just couldn't because I had a laugh coming and it insisted upon the right of way. "Insider" can't help thinking that deeds of neighborly kindness and helpfulness must be scarce as the proverbial "hens' teeth" in the immediate vicinity of the habitation that "Outsider" honors with his presence, if so simple a fact as a score or two of "Grangers" putting in a day's work to help an invalid brother could call forth such an effusion as the one in question.

Dear "Outsider," you wasn't looking over the fence, because if you had been you would have seen far, far more than what you described; you must have been peeping through a very small knot-hole, and with one eye shut and the other bandaged at that. The writer has no personal acquaintance with Pleasant Valley Grange, but the "fence" does not intervene, and would need more than "Outsider's" persuasive pen to convince us that "the knife and fork" are its chief implements; though for the matter of that who has a better right to enjoy the best of food in abundance, than the man upon whom rests the honor of producing it?

"Outsider," who evidently is sitting in "the seat of the scornful" should get down therefrom and stand shoulder to shoulder with men whose doing the best to make the world better and brighter in the only way there is to it, namely, by doing what they can do, in their own little corner of God's mighty universe; and when he has done this, he will know without anybody telling him, that when Grangers do a deed of neighborly kindness and helpfulness they do not allow their "press agent" to herald their good works from the house tops. Grangers do not boast of their good works because good work is an every day affair of all P. of H., and it brings its own reward. Our brothers of Pleasant Valley Grange—this same sure, unite with me in thanking "Outsider" for his somewhat "left-handed" compliment, and also in regretting that there is anyone living in Knox county that has so grossly misunderstood the aims and object of the Granges, as to imagine for even one little minute, that it consists solely of plenty to eat and a good time. We do boast of our good times, and with our "well-out" "Outsider" position we shall probably continue to do so. But if "Outsider" will so far forget his unworthy grouch as to get over on the right side of the fence and quit the "scornful" position, we will let the Grangers of Knox county will take pleasure in showing him something of the love and charity for others that he so evidently lacks. And there has been a place where you forget your little grouch and remember only that "the welfare of one is bound up in the good of all."

Grangers are always and ever trying to learn something, and if "Outsider" will show us a better way to keep "Johnnie Green" out of the pool-room, and the rumshop, and the house of ill repute, than to give him a chance to excite his taste for music by "playing a duet" on a jews-harp, if that is what he likes to do, why we will all be glad to listen too, and profit by his advice. But we will never, never forget the jews-harp, for all that. "Cheer up, 'Outsider' the worst is yet to come. The summer of 1910 will see such Grange meetings, such suppers, such musical and literary recitals, such socials, such singing and uplifting sessions in the Granges of old Knox county, as never have been seen before, and they will all be chronicled in the press with a plentiful sprinkling of articles, but our charity will leave for you to see, and we hope that you will not fail in doing likewise. Insider.

Reuel Whitney and "Chick" Blackington returned from Alford's Lake, Thursday with two good-sized salmon. They had tried to catch a third, but it was thought to be larger than the lake. Thorndike and Hix are doing a large fish business. Thursday there arrived at their wharf the schooner Ellen C. Burke, Capt. Nunan, with 900 pounds of mackerel fish, and the sloop Breze, Capt. Pulk, with 5,000 pollock.

The revenue cutter Woodbury, which has done excellent service on this coast for many years, is soon to be equipped with wireless apparatus, a contract having been made. Many times in the past, there have been occasions when the wireless would have been of great benefit to the Woodbury. In making her cruises along the Maine coast, it has always been necessary for her to call into different ports to see if there have been any telegrams received for her command. With the wireless communication could at once be established and many valuable minutes could be saved in answering a call for distress. When a vessel is ashore minutes of precious time are lost in waiting for a message, and the wireless would make an excellent help in all such cases.

Three blind men are on their way to Rockland, who are the only trio of their kind in the world. This blind trio gives a first class concert and an illustrated lecture upon the blind and their schools, including the new State Institution at Portland. They are recent graduates of the noted Perkins' Institution for the Blind in South Boston. The entertainment will be a novel one, for old and young. They manage their own troupe, one of them having come on in advance and made contracts throughout this section of Maine. Sympathy with such young

CAPT. ZEKE'S VESSELS

Interesting Comments by a California Friend, Who Cannot Imagine Mr. Nash in White Shirt, Collar and Tie.

Editor of The Courier-Gazette—It was with pleasure that I received a few days ago, your paper of March 25, in which appears a likeness of Capt. "Zeke" Nash, who in my time was a pace-maker for the Maine coasters.

This was some 42 years ago and the likeness in your paper differs somewhat from my recollection of his personal appearance at that time. The white shirt, collar and tie; also the vest, are things that I should not have felt justified in adding to the portrait had the commission been given to me to produce same from memory. I do not think that money would have tempted Capt. "Zeke" to adopt such a wardrobe as that, in the early days. Blue coat and trousers, no vest, and a red-flannel shirt was the familiar costume, even in the coldest weather of winter. Cold did not seem to jar him in the least and he always appeared comfortable and happy.

In the main, he may have laid his vessel up in the winter, but I remember one season that was the exception (1867-8, I think) when Capt. Ed. Thomas had his schooner "Copy" tied up at the same place. When Capt. Nash's memory is good, he will remember killing a rat and sticking it part way through the top of the companion-way door of the "Copy," and when Thomas discovering the animal, related that it had crawled up, got part way through, stuck and froze to death. Capt. Thomas had taken extra precaution to keep rats from getting into his vessel.

Some of the old-time masters I remember well associated with the vessels following: Capt. Drinkwater, sch. Hattie Coomber; Kennedy, schs. Concord and Ocean Star; Robinson, sch. Atlanta.

All the vessels Capt. Nash commanded up to the spring of 1868 I was familiar with, and recall many of their peculiarities. When the tide was out sch. Concord stood with stern high in the air, being much deeper aft than forward. The old Mount Hope was considered a dull sailer and not very pretty to look at. Sch. Eben C. Brown was a pretty little vessel and smart. The fleetwing was a handsome vessel, but her sailing qualities as I remember, did not come up to expectations. Schs. Moses Waring and Shenandoah did not run out of Rockland long. The latter vessel hailed from Tuckahoe when she first came to the port, and a peculiar feature I recall was some work around the head sails that appeared to have been done with a stencil designed for some other purpose, as it ran thus, "SHENANDOAH & Co. (and the good) being superfluous. Some of the old craft were fast and some slow, but Capt "Zeke" seemed to have a faculty for knocking time out of them all. His career has certainly been a remarkable one, and many of your absent readers have no doubt received with pleasure this reminder of the genial captain as given in your paper and will wish him many years of health and happiness, and more "coasting" if he still insists upon it. TO MEET IN CALAIS

East Maine Methodists to Have Annual Conference There This Week.

Pastors and members of Methodist churches in Knox county and all over the Rockland district are looking forward to the 63rd annual conference of the East Maine Conference, which meets this year in Calais on invitation of Knight Memorial M. E. church. This will be the third time the East Maine Conference has been held in Calais, the two former occasions having been in 1875 and 1897. The date of this year's conference is April 20-25. The presiding officer this year will be Bishop William A. Quayle, D. D., LL. D., of Oklahoma. Bishop Quayle is in many respects the most distinguished bishop in all Methodism. He had a remarkable career as pastor of large churches in Chicago and other great cities of this country and is an ex-college president. He has few equals on the lecture platform and is an author well known in the religious world. He is one of the writers of whom it is said, "his prose is almost poetry."

One of the chief features of the conference this year is that sometime before its close a meeting of the Laymen's Association of the East Maine Conference will be held. This organization was formed in Bangor while the Chapman-Alexander meetings were in progress, and it is believed the movement will grow and that it will result in great and lasting good. At the organization meeting L. S. Robinson of this city was elected vice-president. There will be a few important ministerial changes in this end of the district.

Major Henry A. Shorey, editor and publisher of the Brighton News, has just passed his 70th birthday. Young and ambitious editors who think that a sufficient age for retirement should undertake to cross pens with this veteran journalist.

YOUR FAVORITE POEM

Old-fashioned poetry, but choicely good. —Isaac Walton.

A Wet Sheet and a Flowing Sea

A wet sheet and a flowing sea,
A wind that follows fast;
And fills the white and rustling sail
And bends the gallant mast;
And lends the gallant mast, my boys,
While like the eagle free
Away the good ship flies, and leaves
Old England on the lee.

O for a soft and gentle wind!

I have a fair one here;
But give me the sailing breeze
And white waves leaving high;
And white waves leaving high, my lads,
The good ship tight and free—
The world of waters is our home,
And merry men are we.

There's tempest in you horned moon,
And lightning in you cloud;
But hark the music, sweetest!
The wind is piping loud, my boys,
The lightning flashes free—
While the follow oak our palace is,
Our heritage the sea.

—A. Cunningham.

The Perfume of the Lady In Black

Laying aside the half bantering manner which he had used toward M. Darzac and which we had all found extremely disagreeable, he gently released himself from the clasp of the Lady in Black, who still clung to him, walked toward the door, folded his arms and said:

"You see, my friends, in an affair like this it does not do to neglect any point. There were two manifestations of Robert Darzac which entered the square tower. There were two manifestations which came out, and one of these was in the sack! That is where one loses oneself. And even now I do not wish to make any mistakes. Will Darzac, here present, permit me to say that I had a hundred excuses for suspecting him?"

Then I thought to myself: "How unlucky that he did not mention his suspicions to me! I would have told him about the map of Australia."

Darzac strode across the room and planted himself in front of the young reporter and said in a tone nearly inaudible from anger:

"What excuses? I ask you what excuses?"

"You will soon understand, my friend," said the reporter, with the utmost calmness. "The first thing that I said to myself while I was examining the conditions surrounding your manifestation of Larsen was this: 'Nonsense! If he were Larsen, would not Professor Stanger's daughter have perceived it? That is self-evident, the common sense of that thought, is it not? But when I tried to look into the mind of the lady who has become Mme. Darzac I discovered beyond a doubt, monsieur, that all the while she could not free herself from just this fear—the fear that you might be Larsen!'"

Mathilde, who had fallen half fainting into a chair, gathered strength enough to start up and to protest against the words with a frightened, despairing gesture.

As for M. Darzac, his face was a picture of hopeless anguish.

CHAPTER XX.

"You Are Larsen!"

"When I recall all the acts of Mme. Darzac after your return from San Remo I can see now in each one of them an expression of the terror which she experienced from her fear that she should allow the secret to escape her. Everything must be said, everything must be explained, here and now if there is to be peace in the future. We are about to clear up the situation. There was nothing natural or happy in Mme. Stanger's behavior. The very eagerness with which she assented to your desire to hasten the marriage ceremony proved the longing she felt to definitely banish the torment of her soul."

"From the moment of your return from the south until the apparition at the railroad station, monsieur, she lived in the most utter misery. She was already crying for help—for help against herself, against her thoughts and perhaps even against you. But she dared not reveal her thought to any person because she dreaded that any confidant might say to her—"

"And Roulettabille leaned over and said in M. Darzac's ear, not so low that I could not hear, but so softly that the words did not reach Mathilde, 'Are you going mad again?'"

Then, lifting his head again, he continued:

"You ought to understand everything better now, my dear M. Darzac, both the strange coldness with which you were treated occasionally and also the fits of remorseful tenderness which in the doubt which filled her brain would impel Mme. Darzac to surround you with every evidence of attention and affection. I have fancied that you must have discovered that whenever Mme. Darzac looked at you she could not in spite of herself chase from her mind the image of Larsen, and consequently it was not the belief that she would be known, it was the knowledge of her own suspicions, since in spite of herself she entertained the fear all the while that you and Larsen were one. No, not my suspicions were removed by another cause."

"They might have been removed," exclaimed M. Darzac at once ironically and despairingly—"they might have been removed by the simple course of reasoning that if I had been Larsen, having her for my wife, I would have had every cause for making her believe in Larsen's death. And I would have never resuscitated myself. Was it not upon the day that Larsen returned to earth that I lost Mathilde?"

"Pardon, monsieur, pardon!" replied Roulettabille, whose face had grown as white as a sheet. "You are abandoning now, if I may say so, the directions of pure reason. The facts which you mentioned show us just the contrary of that which you believe we should see. For my part, it seems to me that when one has a wife who believes of whom comes very near to believing that one is Larsen one has every interest in showing her that Larsen exists outside of oneself!"

As Roulettabille uttered these words the Lady in Black, supporting herself by groping with her hands against the wall as she walked, came stumblingly to the side of Roulettabille and devoted with her eyes the face of Darzac, which had grown frightfully harsh and strained. The young man imperturbably went on:

"And, if you had an interest in showing her that Larsen existed elsewhere than in your body, there arose an exigency in which that interest was transformed into an immediate necessity. Imagine—I say imagine—M. Darzac, that you had really brought Larsen to life once—once only—in spite of yourself, in your own rooms, before the eyes of Professor Stanger's daughter, and you will be, I repeat, under the necessity of bringing him to life again and yet again, outside of yourself, in order to prove to your wife that the Larsen whom she has seen returned to life is not you. Ah, calm yourself, my dear M. Darzac, I entreat you. Have I not told you that my suspicion has been banished—completely banished? See, then, where I am obliged to come in considering this hypothesis as realized (these are the procedures of mathematics which you know better than I—you who are a scholar)—in considering, as I said, as realized the hypothesis that you are the counterfeit Darzac, the one who hides Larsen. According to my reasoning, then, you are Larsen! And I asked myself what could have happened at the railway station at Bourg to make you appear in the form of Larsen before the eyes of your wife?"

He paused for a moment, but Darzac did not utter a word.

"As you were saying, M. Darzac," Roulettabille went on, "it was because of this apparition of Larsen that your cup of happiness was dashed empty to the ground. Therefore, if this resurrection should not have been voluntary, there is only one other way in which it could have happened—through accident. And now just let us consider how this latter supposition clears up the entire situation. Oh, I have spent a lot of thought upon the incident at Bourg. You see, I am still reasoning out the problem. You (the you who is Larsen, be it understood) are at Bourg in the buffet. You believe that your wife is waiting for you somewhere in the station, as she told you she would do. After having finished your letters, you wish to go to your compartment in the car in order to attend to some detail of your toilet or to cast a critical eye over your disguise to see if in any point it might be lacking. You think to yourself, 'A few more hours of this comedy and we shall have passed the frontier, she will be all my own, entirely alone with me, and I will throw aside this mask.' You cast away your assumed character and your disguise. You relieve yourself of the false beard and the spectacles, and at that very moment the door of the section opens. Your wife, thrown into a spasm of terror at the sight of Larsen's smooth, beardless face in the glass, does not wait to make any further investigation and rushes out into the night, her screams drowned by the noise of another train. You comprehend the danger at once. You realize that everything is lost unless you can immediately arrange matters so that your wife shall see Darzac somewhere else. You quickly resume the mask; you hurry out of the compartment and reach the buffet by a shorter route than that taken by your wife. She finds you standing up. You have not even had time enough to seat yourself before she enters. Is everything safe now? No, no! You are in trouble. You are only beginning, for the fearful thought that you may be at one and the same time both Darzac and Larsen will not leave her mind. Upon the platform of the station, while passing beneath the gas jet, she casts a frightened glance at you, lets go your hand and runs wildly into the office of the station master."

"You read her thought as though she had spoken it. The abominable idea must be banished without a moment's delay. You quit the office, leaving the lady in the care of the superintendent, and immediately return, closing the door quickly, seeking to give the impression that you, too, have seen Larsen. In order to ease her mind and also for the purpose of deceiving us all in case she dared reveal her suspicions to any one, you are the first to warn me that something unforeseen has happened—to send me a dispatch. See how clear and plain as the day your every act becomes! You cannot refuse to take her to rejoin her father. She would go without you. And, since nothing is yet really lost, you have the hope that everything may be regained. In the course of the journey your wife continues to have alternating periods of faith in you and of fear of you. She gives you her revolver in a sort of half delirium, which might sum itself up in some such phrase as this: 'If he is Darzac, let him protect me; if he is Larsen, let him kill me!'"

Darzac, both the strange coldness with which you were treated occasionally and also the fits of remorseful tenderness which in the doubt which filled her brain would impel Mme. Darzac to surround you with every evidence of attention and affection. I have fancied that you must have discovered that whenever Mme. Darzac looked at you she could not in spite of herself chase from her mind the image of Larsen, and consequently it was not the belief that she would be known, it was the knowledge of her own suspicions, since in spite of herself she entertained the fear all the while that you and Larsen were one. No, not my suspicions were removed by another cause."

"They might have been removed," exclaimed M. Darzac at once ironically and despairingly—"they might have

"Pardon, monsieur, pardon!" replied Roulettabille, whose face had grown as white as a sheet. "You are abandoning now, if I may say so, the directions of pure reason. The facts which you mentioned show us just the contrary of that which you believe we should see. For my part, it seems to me that when one has a wife who believes of whom comes very near to believing that one is Larsen one has every interest in showing her that Larsen exists outside of oneself!"

As Roulettabille uttered these words the Lady in Black, supporting herself by groping with her hands against the wall as she walked, came stumblingly to the side of Roulettabille and devoted with her eyes the face of Darzac, which had grown frightfully harsh and strained. The young man imperturbably went on:

"And, if you had an interest in showing her that Larsen existed elsewhere than in your body, there arose an exigency in which that interest was transformed into an immediate necessity. Imagine—I say imagine—M. Darzac, that you had really brought Larsen to life once—once only—in spite of yourself, in your own rooms, before the eyes of Professor Stanger's daughter, and you will be, I repeat, under the necessity of bringing him to life again and yet again, outside of yourself, in order to prove to your wife that the Larsen whom she has seen returned to life is not you. Ah, calm yourself, my dear M. Darzac, I entreat you. Have I not told you that my suspicion has been banished—completely banished? See, then, where I am obliged to come in considering this hypothesis as realized (these are the procedures of mathematics which you know better than I—you who are a scholar)—in considering, as I said, as realized the hypothesis that you are the counterfeit Darzac, the one who hides Larsen. According to my reasoning, then, you are Larsen! And I asked myself what could have happened at the railway station at Bourg to make you appear in the form of Larsen before the eyes of your wife?"

He paused for a moment, but Darzac did not utter a word.

"As you were saying, M. Darzac," Roulettabille went on, "it was because of this apparition of Larsen that your cup of happiness was dashed empty to the ground. Therefore, if this resurrection should not have been voluntary, there is only one other way in which it could have happened—through accident. And now just let us consider how this latter supposition clears up the entire situation. Oh, I have spent a lot of thought upon the incident at Bourg. You see, I am still reasoning out the problem. You (the you who is Larsen, be it understood) are at Bourg in the buffet. You believe that your wife is waiting for you somewhere in the station, as she told you she would do. After having finished your letters, you wish to go to your compartment in the car in order to attend to some detail of your toilet or to cast a critical eye over your disguise to see if in any point it might be lacking. You think to yourself, 'A few more hours of this comedy and we shall have passed the frontier, she will be all my own, entirely alone with me, and I will throw aside this mask.' You cast away your assumed character and your disguise. You relieve yourself of the false beard and the spectacles, and at that very moment the door of the section opens. Your wife, thrown into a spasm of terror at the sight of Larsen's smooth, beardless face in the glass, does not wait to make any further investigation and rushes out into the night, her screams drowned by the noise of another train. You comprehend the danger at once. You realize that everything is lost unless you can immediately arrange matters so that your wife shall see Darzac somewhere else. You quickly resume the mask; you hurry out of the compartment and reach the buffet by a shorter route than that taken by your wife. She finds you standing up. You have not even had time enough to seat yourself before she enters. Is everything safe now? No, no! You are in trouble. You are only beginning, for the fearful thought that you may be at one and the same time both Darzac and Larsen will not leave her mind. Upon the platform of the station, while passing beneath the gas jet, she casts a frightened glance at you, lets go your hand and runs wildly into the office of the station master."

"You read her thought as though she had spoken it. The abominable idea must be banished without a moment's delay. You quit the office, leaving the lady in the care of the superintendent, and immediately return, closing the door quickly, seeking to give the impression that you, too, have seen Larsen. In order to ease her mind and also for the purpose of deceiving us all in case she dared reveal her suspicions to any one, you are the first to warn me that something unforeseen has happened—to send me a dispatch. See how clear and plain as the day your every act becomes! You cannot refuse to take her to rejoin her father. She would go without you. And, since nothing is yet really lost, you have the hope that everything may be regained. In the course of the journey your wife continues to have alternating periods of faith in you and of fear of you. She gives you her revolver in a sort of half delirium, which might sum itself up in some such phrase as this: 'If he is Darzac, let him protect me; if he is Larsen, let him kill me!'"

"Then, lifting his head again, he continued:

"You ought to understand everything better now, my dear M. Darzac, both the strange coldness with which you were treated occasionally and also the fits of remorseful tenderness which in the doubt which filled her brain would impel Mme. Darzac to surround you with every evidence of attention and affection. I have fancied that you must have discovered that whenever Mme. Darzac looked at you she could not in spite of herself chase from her mind the image of Larsen, and consequently it was not the belief that she would be known, it was the knowledge of her own suspicions, since in spite of herself she entertained the fear all the while that you and Larsen were one. No, not my suspicions were removed by another cause."

"They might have been removed," exclaimed M. Darzac at once ironically and despairingly—"they might have

FROM WASHINGTON

(From our regular correspondent.)

Washington, D. C., April 12.—When Representative Fitzgerald recently introduced an amendment designed to bring about the repeal of the present tariff law, he did the Republican party in particular and the whole people of the Nation in general a favor that can hardly be overestimated. The amendment was voted down, and the tariff law upheld by a vote of 150 to 115. Every Republican of the House of Representatives, without exception, voting to sustain the present law, while every Democrat voted in favor of its repeal. It must be understood that some 20 Republicans voted against the bill on its passage last August, and now not one can be found to vote for its repeal. This is the most complete vindication of the new law that could be had, and the Republican party can henceforth go before the country hand in hand with the President with the tariff as the chief issue of the coming campaign.

The benefits that have accrued to the country under the operation of the new law are more and more apparent every day. The tariff has already been called in these columns the success of the measure as a revenue law. The receipts so far during the present fiscal year, ending June 30 next, being some $20,000,000 more than during the corresponding months of last year, while the deficit of about $70,000,000 a year ago is now only about $14,000,000, and there seems to be no doubt that this deficit will be wiped out by the end of the fiscal year.

Again there is a full volume of employment all over the country, and our people were never so prosperous as now. It is true we have had much about high prices, but it has been shown beyond question that these high prices are in no way attributable to the tariff. But the best news of all which we are having is the constant and voluntary increase of wages by the great corporations and railroads of the country. Nearly all of the Eastern trunk lines, including such roads as the Pennsylvania, Philadelphia and Reading, the Baltimore and Ohio, the New York, New Haven and Hartford, the Boston and Maine and others have increased wages recently. And this increase has been by no means confined to the railroads—the United Steel Corporation and various other large corporations have followed, and the adjustment now made in mining centers will no doubt result in widespread increase in all the coal miners of the country.

As regards the present business situation, it can be summed up in the recent statement of R. G. Dun & Co., who say: "While the trade development of the country is diversified and conditions in different sections of the country, the volume as a whole has made steady gains over last year that there can be no question as to its substantial character." To these splendid results of the new tariff law in all the avenues of finance and business which is affected by the law, can be added the splendid progress now being made in Congress to amend the tariff laws and to adopt the recommendations of the President. The large appropriation bills are now practically out of the way, and for the next few weeks Congress will be engaged in passing laws strengthening the Interstate Commerce Commission, providing for better regulations as to the railroads, providing for postal savings banks, a so-called anti-injunction law, admitting the two new states will go before the Senate, and, in short, fulfilling as far as possible the promises of the party and the President. Thus the issues of the coming Congressional campaign will be clearly defined, and the Republicans will go before the country with the utmost confidence that the President and the party will be sustained through the return of a Republican majority to the next House of Representatives.

Governor Harmon of Ohio, in a recent interview, which was practically an announcement of his policies and beliefs, has made the issue with the Democrats very clear, and it seems to be the basis of the campaign, which consists simply of opposing everything the Republican party stands for. Governor Harmon on the tariff question is a practical free trader, and announces that he is for a tariff for revenue only. That would close thousands of mills throughout the country and throw millions of men out of work, and even if a Democratic House of Representatives should pass such a tariff, it would be quickly vetoed by the President. Governor Harmon should send it to a Republican Senate, where it would be quickly pigeonholed, still it would bring about a check to our prosperity and an anxiety in business circles which would do untold harm. Mr. Harmon might better have kept silent. His interview shows that he is not only ignorant on National affairs, but would play the part of a demagogue in appealing for the votes of the people to place him in the Presidential chair. His interview has weakened him materially before the voters of the country, and it will no doubt have much effect in defeating him for his race for governorship in Ohio this fall.

While the Republican party has been facing many unpleasant situations during the past few weeks it is emerging from the clouds into clear sunshine and long before the 8th of next November it will be found that in every State and in every section of the country there is a united party, backing up the President, and quite willing to rest its case before the people upon what it has done and upon the record of the administration up to that time.

The London "Economist," a free-trade journal, which is collecting a fund to promote free-trade agitation, states that the increase in prices in the United Kingdom from the average from 1896 to February 1910, was only about 20 per cent. "Only" is rather a strange word to use for that free-trade country, where no one thinks of ascribing the increased cost of living to tariff rates. Of course, the "Economist" tries to make out that the increase has been greater in the United States, but it concedes that the cost of living has gone up the world over, and there can be no question about it being a matter entirely independent of the tariff rates. Of course the Democratic free-traders in the United States try to make out that the tariff is responsible for the increase, though the increase has been greater in products on which the tariff was reduced or removed altogether than in products on which the rates were increased. They will not attempt to explain the increase in the United Kingdom, nor explain the increase in the price of hides in this country, on which the duty was removed, nor tell how it comes about that boots and shoes have advanced in price, although the industry was furnished with free hides and the duty on boots and shoes very greatly reduced. The free-traders hope for success only from ignorance caused by their misrepresentation of the facts.

WITH GATHERED SLEEVES IN FULL OR THREE-QUARTER LENGTH OR PLAIN LOOSE SLEEVES.

Young girls that are wearing a great many dresses that are made with blouses over plaited skirts. This one is quite novel and in every way attractive. Also it is so easy to make that busy mothers will find it a boon. The blouse is open at the left of the front but is joined at the lower edge and the facing is applied over it, so that it is drawn on over the head and can be closed invisibly or with buttons and buttonholes as liked. Such a gingham makes the dress illustrated but such a model is appropriate for all childish materials, the woofs of immediate wear as well as the washable ones of the future. For the early spring series, cashmere and similar materials can be so made, for the coming summer linen, gingham and materials of the sort are charming while later the model can be utilized for the thinner lawn and the like.

The costume consists of the skirt, the fitted body portion and the blouse. The skirt is straight and is joined to the fitted body and the two are closed at the back. The blouse is made with front and back portions but the front edges are lapped and are joined for a short distance and the facing is applied over the lower edge of the blouse. The sleeves are in one piece and the full ones are finished with applied trimming.

The quantity of material required for the medium size (12 years) is 6½ yards 24, 5 yards 27, 4½ yards 32 or 2½ yards 44 inches wide. WHY SALVES FAIL TO CURE ECZEMA

Scientists are now agreed that the eczema germs are lodged not in the outer skin or epidermis, but in the inner skin. Hence, a penetrating liquid is required, not an outward salve that clogs the pores.

We recommend to all eczema patients the standard prescription Oil of Wintergreen as compounded in Liquid form known as D. D. D. Prescription, at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. A trial bottle of this D. D. D. Prescription at only 25 cents, will instantly relieve the itch. We have sold and recommended this remedy for years, and know of wonderful cures from its use. We recommend it to our patrons.

FROM NEW YORK

Opening of New Transportation Epoch in Which Three Passengers Will be Handled Every Second—$55,000 Trains Over 43,000 Miles in Length Enter and Leave This City Annually—Plan to Diverge Immigrants from New York.

New York, April 13. Preparations for the handling of 90,000,000 passengers, incoming and outgoing, and nearly 50,000 miles of trains annually over its various railroads are now so near completion that only a few weeks remain until the inauguration of what may be called New York's fourth transportation epoch, through which its title to being the world's greatest railway center is to be clinched beyond argument. How gigantic are the improvements which have been necessary to achieve this end are indicated by the latest figures gathered in connection with the city's passenger traffic. One railroad traveler out of every ten throughout the whole country is either bound to or from New York, since out of the 300,000,000 carried by all railroads, 30,000,000 are handled here in a year. The first great factor in the new methods of handling this tremendous traffic will be the tunnels under the Hudson River, the East River and the Island of Manhattan. Not taking into consideration subways, there are now completed or nearing completion twenty of these tubes, with a total length of more than 25 miles through which passengers will be carried to and from the heart of Manhattan. To afford facilities for handling these passengers, the two busiest terminals in the world will be necessary, one for the roads from the north and east; the other for those from the west and south, for to get travelers in and out of New York one train must be handled each minute of the day. This is at the rate of 1440 trains daily or 525,600 a year. Figuring as shown by the actual measurements that each train is about one-twelfth of a mile long this amounts to a total of 43,000 miles of train entering and leaving the city each year, or enough to travel nearly twice around the world. Incidentally either of the two terminals may claim to be the world's busiest spot, since each will handle in one year 30,000,000 people, equal to about one-fourth of the country's population. Were all the passengers to be handled separately the amount of time which could be devoted to other work would be less than one-third of a second.

There are still some people who object to vaccination as a means of preventing small pox, as is shown by the introduction of a bill into the New York state legislature to do away with the compulsory enforcement of this precautionary measure. Similar bills are pending in a number of other states. In view of the fact that there is particular interest in a report on the subject of vaccination and its effects which has just been made by Dr. Jay Frank Schamberg, and which is published by the National Association for the Distribution to the lay public from its headquarters in Chicago. Dr. Schamberg points out that in the countries where vaccination is generally enforced the death rate from small pox is only one-eighth as frequent as in nations where the practice is not enforced by law. In this respect Germany, where re-vaccination is required after a certain period, makes the best showing of all the larger nations with one death from small pox to each million of population. Spain and Russia which do not enforce vaccination by law stand at the other end of the list with 468 and 462 deaths per year from this dread disease to each million inhabitants. One of the most striking results that has been obtained by the sanitary authorities of the United States has been the practically stamping out small pox in the Philippines where more than 3,000,000 vaccinations were performed in two years without a single death. Dr. Schamberg's conclusion is that in view of the existence of cases of this disease in almost all the large cities of the country, the only safety from a destructive scourge lies in a continuation of the policy of enforced vaccination.

Now comes the carving school, or to give it its real title, the school of applied carving, as the latest thing in the line of education. While cooking schools are an old if not always honest thing, the world over, it has remained for a local institution of learning to include in its curriculum instruction in the strenuous art of cutting up the food after it is cooked. This latest trend to the "inexpensive" is under the jurisdiction of the "arts" of household arts of the university which has just included it in its courses of instruction, and will, in view of the fact that the bride and bridegroom need no longer look forward with fear and trembling to the serving of their first dinner, least disaster overtake them when the critical moment for carving the bird or roast arrives. The new course will consist of a series of lectures by the head chef of a well known club dining room which he will demonstrate on real food the proper most economical method of dismembering anything from a steak or a fish to a duck. For each of the simpler dishes, it is expected that a single lecture will be enough, but for the explanation of the complicated such as geese, turkeys and the like, several lectures may be necessary. Of course the object of the classes is to teach how to use meats to the best advantage on the table, but it is fully as important to know how to cook it. Whether persons taking the course will receive a degree of Bachelor of Carving has not been stated, but the right to append initials to his name would undoubtedly increase the eligibility of the average bachelor.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve but do not cure. Here is evidence to prove that Doan's Kidney Pills cure, and the cure is lasting.

Mrs. Chas. Lunt, 4 Rankin St., Rockland, Me., says: "I have used Doan's Kidney Pills during the past five years and I know this remedy lives up to the claims made for it. For several years I was an almost constant sufferer from backache and a distressing kidney weakness. If I over-exercised myself or contracted the slightest cold, I was sure to have a pain in my back and at such times the kidney secretions became scanty. I also had dizzy spells and sometimes felt so badly that I could hardly drag myself about. Doan's Kidney Pills removed the backache and kidney difficulty and proved of great benefit to me in every way. I have felt some symptoms of the trouble since but I am never without Doan's Kidney Pills in the house and take a few doses now and then when I feel the backache coming on and always find relief."

have landed at this port, and nearly six-sevenths have landed at five north Atlantic ports and San Francisco. Up to the year of the last panic the annual arrivals at New York exceeded 1,000,000 annually for the three preceding years, the great majority of whom found employment or started in business in the territory tributary to this city, so that New York state today has the largest foreign-born population in the Union and with its adjacent states has been monopolizing the services of foreigners in developing its resources and industries. The south, on the other hand, in spite of its need of labor and the opportunities which it offers, has received a proportionally small number of foreign arrivals. Less than three per cent of the total coming to this country land at the South Atlantic or in the south central ports, although the need of labor is far more acutely felt in the contiguous territory than it is about New York. Heretofore the steamship service from European ports to the south has not been such as to be able to compete with that to New York, and once the foreigner is landed in this city figures show that he is not likely to spend much money for railroad fare to more distant sections, no matter what opportunities are offered there. Now, however, conditions are to be changed by the Hamburg-American line has just announced that, beginning with May, a new monthly steamer passenger service from Hamburg to New Orleans, will be established, and that later it will be made fortnightly. As the steamship fare to the southern city will be the same as that to New York, thus saving to immigrants going south most of the railroad fare from this city to their destination, it is believed that this new service will be instrumental in diverting many immigrants to the south where there are better opportunities for them and where they are more urgently needed than here.

In spite of the general belief to the contrary, gum chewing continues to be a habit of growing popularity. At any rate statistics just collected here covering this subject show that no less than 3,000,000 pieces of chewing gum are produced in this country annually. The question naturally arises as to who chews it all and what becomes of it after mastication, for since these pieces would, if laid from end to end, reach six times around the earth without touching, it follows that they would after they had served their usefulness make a very sizeable hill. New York alone accounts for 200,000,000 sticks annually, easily taking first place in this respect. According to the computations of the statistician, the energy expended throughout the world each day in chewing gum is equal to that necessary to light a city of 250,000 inhabitants. But no one has yet solved the mystery as to what becomes of the gum after it is chewed.

Catarrhal Asthma and Hay Fever

Tens of thousands of sufferers from hay fever and catarrhal asthma find great comfort and quick relief by breathing Hyomel.

Of course where asthma is not caused by a catarrhal condition, but by nervous contraction of the bronchial tubes, Hyomel is not recommended.

But in a case of asthma where there is a discharge of mucus, breathing Hyomel gives most wonderful relief by soothing the irritated and inflamed membrane.

Mr. W. A. White, R. F. D. No. 1, Evansport, writes: "I have been bothered with asthma for over five years but could not get any relief until I tried Hyomel. I have spent lots of money on remedies for asthma and if I could not get another bottle I would not be without Hyomel for $50. I recommend it."

A complete Hyomel outfit including hard rubber pocket inhaler costs $1.00 with instructions for use in hay fever and asthma. Extra bottles of Hyomel cost 50 cents at druggists everywhere and at C. H. Pendleton's and W. H. Kittredge's.

Idea for the Cook. Dainty, delicious sandwiches for after-dinner tea are made of thin slices of buttered bread filled with a mixture of raisins and nuts chopped very fine, moistened with whipped cream and seasoned with a pinch of salt.

Another tasty sandwich is of white bread spread with rich jam and topped with cream cheese.

The despised frizzle beef takes on quite an air of festivity when mixed with chopped green peppers. Another combination is the chopped yolks and whites of hard boiled eggs.

A variation of the ordinary club sandwich is to cut a boneless saddle in half and spread it over the slice of chicken or turkey.

Fried mush is much better if the mush is cooked a whole day in a double boiler set on the back of the stove. Water must be renewed when it threatens to boil away.

A nice homemade confection can be made from prunes with the seeds removed and stuffed with peanuts, browned in the oven in butter or olive oil. Do not salt the peanuts.

NEWBET TRIAL WAS COSTLY

It Lasted Less Than Three Days, But Knox County is Nearly $2,000 Poorer.

The April term of supreme court, which was adjourned last Thursday noon, after a session of nine days, would have lasted only a few days but for the criminal dockets.

With the enlarged jurisdiction of the Rockland Municipal Court and the short sessions of the Supreme Court it has been suggested by a great many that we might easily dispense with either the January or the April term of the Supreme Court and save the county $2000 per year. The expenses of the April term were $206.65 apportioned as follows: Grand jury, $124.48; first traverse jury, $242; second traverse jury, $354.20; super-numerary jury, $54.72; constables fees, $27.12; sheriff's bills, $233.60; general bills, $55.98; and bills of costs $808.55.

It may be interesting to our readers to know some of the items that figured in the cost of the Newbert murder case. Senator Staples, who was appointed by the court to defend Mrs. Newbert's body and for its re-interment, Marshall P. Cram, A. M. P. H. D., assistant professor of chemistry at Bowdoin College, presented a bill of $100 for making the analysis and $71.50 for sending court and expenses.

Dr. Hoald and Crockett were each allowed $25 for their testimony as experts. A. C. Strout and Son, undertakers, were allowed $35 for their services at the second exhumation of Newbert's body.

Dr. Crockett's charge for each of the autopsies was $25. Besides, there were some 30 other witnesses who were paid for their attendance at the trial.

Mrs. Newbert was engaged in the trial was quite an item. Her board bill at M. H. Nash's being $63.

The above bills of course do not include the expense of the large number of witnesses who were before the grand jury last term when the indictment was returned. A rough estimate places the total cost of the trial at about $2000.

One in all Knox county will be just as well satisfied to be spared any more murder trials for years to come.

The likelihood that Mrs. Newbert will be admitted to bail does not seem very strong, although a great many persons are doubtless wondering why it is that she should be denied bail.

The difference is that Mrs. Newbert has been convicted while two terms have passed without a trial being granted to her.

While the constitution of the state provides that in a murder case, where the presumption of guilt is not great, the court may grant bail and there is no record in Maine in the case of Mrs. Alice E. Cooper of South Windsor, charged with the murder of Charles Northy, Jr., there is no precedent for bail in this case.

Mrs. Cooper was granted bail by the judge of the Augusta municipal court at the conclusion of the preliminary hearing, he not feeling that the presumption of guilt was sufficient to justify the denial of bail.

In January the grand jury reported an indictment, but as the superior court of Kennebec county had no jurisdiction in murder cases the trial did not get under way following March.

The county attorney asked to have the woman committed to jail pending the trial. Judge Hall of the superior court, after hearing the arguments pro and con, took the matter under consideration and eventually decided to permit Mrs. Cooper to remain at liberty on bail until her trial. After that the respondent was not confined in the jail, not even during the trial, which resulted in a verdict of not guilty.

This is a simple case. Mrs. Newbert is not simply charged with the crime of murder or only indicted. She has been indicted and tried and a jury of twelve men has said that she is guilty. The only power in the land which has the right to say that she is innocent is the full bench of judges, hence it is not believed that any bail commissioner would care to take the responsibility of allowing her bail.

This means that she must remain in the county jail here until her case can be disposed of by court at one of its law terms. The next law term is at Bangor in June and following that comes the term in Portland the last of that month. It is thought that her case cannot be prepared in time to be argued at either of those terms, so that it will go to the December term, at Augusta, in which case the earliest time that Mrs. Newbert could either be tried again or receive her sentence would be at the January, 1911 term.

Should the case not be argued until the December term it might not be possible to get a decision sufficiently early to dispose of the case at the January term.

MUSICAL COLLEGIANS

University of Maine Boys Scheduled to Give Fine Concert Here Next Thursday Evening.

The University of Maine Musical Clubs have been fortunate this year in having an excellent musical director, Prof. Thompson, who has worked unceasingly with the boys to develop a concert which would excel anything in the state. The boys have worked with him earnestly, and are capable of affording an evening's entertainment, which will please everybody. The Olee Club is conducted by Mr. Springer, '10, who has sung with the clubs for four years. He has prepared some very pleasing selections, which go with a snap, and keep the audience on their toes every minute. Mr. Davis, '11, has developed a mandolin club which will stand the test of any college club. He has worked to make this part of the concert a special feature, and he deserves much credit for his success. The rendering of "Big Chief Battleaxe" has brought the house down on every occasion. The Banjo Club is led this year by Mr. Morrison, '11, and the leader has selected some catchy and appropriate music. Mr. Wakefield, '11, will do the reading at the Rockland concert. He has been with the clubs for three years and his gifted talent is of a pleasing character. Concerning the tenor soloist, Mr. Sansouci, '12, not enough can be said. He has been the main attraction this year, and with his witty manner and gestures, he has kept the audience in a continuous uproar of laughter. Go and hear "Bill" sing, "Mrs. Casey and Mrs. O'Brien." The quartette is made up of Mr. Chase, '11 first tenor, Mr. Sansouci, '12 second tenor, Mr. Lamb, '10 first bass, and Mr. Wood, '10 second bass. The quartet is well balanced and their rendering of "The Serenade" is well worth hearing.

The concert is given under the auspieces of the Y. M. C. A. and already many tickets have been sold. Remember the time, Thursday evening, the place, Baptist church and the attraction, the U. of M. Musical Clubs.

IN SPORTING CIRCLES

Thomaston High Has Easy Victory Over Vinalhaven in First Game of Season

Vinalhaven high narrowly escaped a skunking in the opening game of the season at Thomaston, Saturday afternoon. The visitors were no match for the wiles of pitcher Daniels, who struck out three men in the first inning, and was very effective thereafter. The solitary hit made off him goes to the credit of shortstop Burns, and was made in the sixth inning. Johnson, the Vinalhaven pitcher, was not hit hard, but had very poor support at times. Doubles were made by Newhall and Whitmore.

The Islanders are handicapped by a lack of seasoned players, while Thomaston has the good fortune to have a majority of last year's men back in the game. In fact there seems to be no reason why Thomaston high should not put in a strong team for the present season. The lineup and summary:

Thomaston high: Wilson 2b, Thompson 2b, Morse ss, Jamison c, Newhall 1b, McDonald lf, Robinson cf, Whitmore rf, Daniels p.

Vinalhaven high: Littlefield lf, Hopkins rf, Johnson p, Burns ss, V Jones 1b, H. Jones 3b, Geary 2b, Bucklin cf, Donohue c.

Thomaston .0 2 2 3 0 1 0 3 x-11

Base hits, Thomaston 6, Vinalhaven 1. Two-base hits, Newhall and Whitmore. Bases on balls, off Johnson 1. Struck out by Daniels 15, by Johnson 5. Errors Thomaston 4, Vinalhaven 9.

The Vinalhaven high has the following schedule for the present season.

April 23—Open.
April 30—Thomaston high at Vinalhaven.

May 7—Vinalhaven high at Camden.
May 14—Camden high at Vinalhaven.

May 21—Vinalhaven high at Rockland.
May 28—Vinalhaven high at New-castle.

June 4—Lincoln Academy at Vinalhaven.
June 11—Rockland high at Vinalhaven.

O. V. Jones is managing and H. C. Jones is captain. The boys are by no means disheartened by their defeat at Thomaston, Saturday.

Mitchellman Wilson, the navy football player, who was injured in the game with Villa Nova last fall, died last Saturday.

The process of moulding a baseball team for Rockland high school this season is going ahead steadily and with results that encourage Manager Lamb to believe that he will do something better than compete for the catcher championship. For the infield positions the candidates have narrowed down as follows: Prescott and I. Snow catcher, T. Healey and Campbell pitcher, Welt and Shuman first base, Forman and Sanson second base, Kallach and Clark third base, Lamb and Fields shortstop. The candidates for the outfield positions are Hall, C. Perry, T. Perry, Brown, Gray, W. Healey, Douglas and Knutson. The first game in the regular schedule will take place Saturday, April 30, when Lincoln Academy comes here.

The aspirations of the "Young Fellers" suffered another severe jolt Friday night when the "Old Uns" beat them 105 pins at Whitney's alleys. Some big strings were rolled on both sides, Thomas having a 10-aring total of 996 while Robinson wound up his evening's performance by knocking down 124 pins in a single score. The score:

JOHN SMALLEY RESIGNS

St. George Deputy Gives Up Turnkey's Berth and Will Seek Sheriff Nomination

Knox county political circles were treated to something of a surprise last week by the announcement that John Smalley had resigned his position as deputy sheriff and turnkey. While no statement has been made as to the cause of this move, it is generally understood that Mr. Smalley will enter the field as candidate for high sheriff.

A few weeks ago it was officially announced that Daniel White would be a candidate in next Democratic county convention, being looked upon as the most likely available candidate to trim Sheriff Tolman.

Mr. White preceded Mr. Smalley as turnkey at the county jail. He is a highly esteemed citizen and faithful officer, but it soon became evident to the leaders of the anti-Tolman movement that he alone could not wrest the cockade from the present sheriff's bonnet.

So Mr. Smalley comes into the field as a deputy sheriff or constable so long that the work is second nature to him. His advent into the field is likely to mean a free-for-all race, with Mr. Tolman against the field.

If the latter is doing any worrying it is not apparent in his placid and smiling features. His opponents say that he has had the office long enough, but they thought so two years ago without altering the result.

Will it be the same this year?

PARWELL OPERA HOUSE.

"A wonderful show, all parts of it," is what was said by every one on leaving the Parwell opera house last night. For a holiday bill this Tuesday (Patriots' Day) it would be hard to secure a better attraction. There are no flaws; there are no fizzes. Everything goes on like clock work, headed by the famous fun and laugh producers, Ed and Helen Sanoles, in their comedy bar and bounding bed act, which is a scream from start to finish and one of the best acts of the season. Madame Phillips, the girl with the many voices, is doing a great character singing act that is pleasing all. On tomorrow, Wednesday night, the great pie eating contest will be offered when three cash prizes will be given, the one eating his pie the quickest. Don't fail to see the boys go in to the pie tomorrow night. Remember this Tuesday night a good holiday amusement program.

THADDEUS W. TYLER DEAD

The death this week of Thaddeus W. Tyler, who inspired Longfellow's poem, "The Village Blacksmith," calls to the writer's mind a somewhat amusing incident which took place in the Rockland high school just a few years ago but that there are doubtless quite a number who will remember it. The poem was being read in one of the classes and a member who now holds an official position in Knox county, "Under the spreading chestnut tree the village blacksmith stands," reads the opening lines, but it didn't sound that way when the aforesaid student read it. With a mixture of nouns and adjectives that may or may not have been accidental, this is how he rendered it: "Under the spreading chestnut tree the village blacksmith stands." The teacher's dismayed look finally gave way to a smile and the revised lines of the poem became one of the school classics. Our readers may not find it so very difficult to guess the name of the student was. The "village chestnut" was by no means his only perpetration during his four years of happy high school life.

TO STIMULATE FARMERS

University of Maine Offers Fine Prizes to Those Who Raise Best Oats, Corn, Potatoes and Apples in Competition.

Three significant facts attest the need for an agricultural awakening in Maine. First, the farmer's farm and orchard products of the state—potatoes, apples, and the grains are not up to the present standards set by competing states; second, thousands of acres of land in the state are being held at a loss instead of returning a profit wholly on account of the methods of farming that are practiced; third, the attention of the whole country is being turned toward the east and the time is most opportune for the development of the vast natural resources and advantages of Maine.

In order to hasten this awakening and to encourage the Maine farmers to do something that will count for themselves the College of Agriculture, University of Maine, is planning to conduct a standing crop and orchard test according to the following outline: Condition in standing fields of oats, fodder and sweet corn will be conducted under the following conditions:

Each interested farmer may enter the competition by making application to the Agronomy Department, University of Maine, before June 30, 1910.

The competing fields of oats shall consist of at least 10 acres; corn, 2 acres; potatoes, 2 acres. Any variety of each of these crops may be grown and may be entered for competition. No regulations whatever are outlined as to preparation of seed, bed, selection of seed, planting of crop, or to cultivation of crop. Certainly it will be to the competitor's interest to give his land the best preparation and the seed the most careful selection in planting. Where commercial fertilizer is applied to the field, the competitor will be asked to state what fertilizer is used and in what quantity. The term fertilizer will include farm yard manure.

The areas of each of these crops shall be judged by an agricultural specialist, sent out from the Agronomy Department for this purpose. The crop will be examined according to a published score card, and the competitor's rating will be announced at the close of the contest.

Farmers entering this contest shall compete for standing as producers of the best areas of these several crops the state. It is proposed to put up the following cups for competition:

For oats—1, cup valued at $50; 2, prize valued at $25; 3, prize valued at $10.

For sweet corn—1, cup valued at $50; 2, prize valued at $25; 3, prize valued at $10.

For foddercorn—1, cup valued at $50; 2, prize valued at $25; 3, prize valued at $10.

For potatoes—1, cup valued at $75; 2, prize valued at $50; 3, prize valued at $25.

These prizes shall be competed for annually, and on a competitor winning a cup three times, it shall become his property. The cup with a sample of the winning material (oats in sheaf—one-half bushel sample, corn—best ten ears, potatoes—one-half bushel—best seed potatoes) shall be exhibited at the Annual Farmers' Week, University of Maine. Each sample shall be labelled with the variety name, and name of owner. The samples shall become the property of the University at the conclusion of the course. Immediately previous to Farmers' Week there shall be published a pamphlet recording the name of each competitor, his address, the name of the crop entered for competition, the standing won, the possible score, the competitor's score, according to score card; the merits of the field, the defects, the quantity of seed for sale and the price per bushel. By this means a valuable medium of advertisement for the crop and its products will be provided by the cheapest means.

At the Annual Farmers' Week a convention shall be called of the competitors who have entered into this contest, and of all others interested. At this convention the most up-to-date and reliable direction for the raising of these crops will be outlined by prominent speakers, specialists in each line.

At the same time there will be a contest in orcharding conducted by the Horticultural department of the University of Maine.

This contest will be between the farmers of the state for the production of the best two acres of orchard. Suitable prizes will be awarded for the three best two-acre blocks competing for the three best barrels; and for the three best boxes of fruit packed from the area entered. Interested farmers may enter the competition by making application to the Horticultural department, University of Maine, before June 30, 1910. The two-acre block may contain trees of any variety and no stipulation as to size, age, or number of trees to the acre, or method of pruning, cultivating, or spraying employed. Of course it will be to the advantage of the competitors to give the orchard the best possible care.

The orchard areas will be judged by an orchard specialist sent out by the College of Agriculture for that purpose. Announcement of where boxed, and barrelled fruit is to be exhibited for judging will be made later. The orchards will be scored according to score card and competitors announced at the close of the contest. The following points will be taken into consideration in judging the orchard:

Condition of trees, including freedom from insect and fungus diseases; size, color, and market quality of the fruit; per cent of full crop that orchard bears. In judging the barrelled and barrelled fruit size, color uniformity, freedom from blemishes, market value of the package, and packing will be taken into consideration. It is expected to obtain the following prizes:

For the best two acres of orchards—1, cup valued at $25; 2, prize valued at $15; 3, prize valued at $10.

For the best barrel of fruit—1, cup valued at $15; 2, prize valued at $10; 3, prize valued at $5.

For the best box of fruit—1, cup valued at $15; 2, prize valued at $10; 3, prize valued at $5.

These prizes shall be competed for annually and if any competitor wins the cup three times it shall become his permanent property. A pamphlet will be issued giving the name and address of each competitor, his standing according to the score card, merits and defects of the box, barrel, or orchard that he has entered in the contest, and the amount of fruit that he has for sale. This will advertise the production of the good grower and give those wishing choice fruit a chance to learn where it may be obtained.

The cups with photographs of the winning orchards, barrels and boxes will be exhibited at the Annual Farmers' Week at the University of Maine.

Correspondence relative to entries in this orchard contest should be addressed to the department of Horticulture, University of Maine, Orono. Applicants are requested to write at their earliest convenience so that the work may be gotten under way at once.

HENKEL'S "BREAD" FLOUR

Read what the Teacher says:

March 17, 1910.

THE COMMERCIAL MILLING COMPANY,

DETROIT, MICHIGAN.

Gentlemen: Henkel's Bread Flour has been in use in the Domestic Science Laboratory of the Rockland High School for the past year. It has been used daily and I have had opportunity to thoroughly test it, both in yeast bread and in baking-powder biscuits. The yeast bread in particular has been fine grained and of good color and it is, in my opinion, the very highest grade flour.

Very respectfully yours,

DANGER FROM BLACKLEG.

Experiment Station Sounds a Warning Against This Potato Disease.

The Maine Agricultural Experiment Station is now mailing Bulletin 174, which discusses a bacterial disease of the stem and tuber of the potato that has only recently been recognized in America. A similar disease known as blackleg has been known in Europe for some time, and it is thought to have been introduced into this country by means of infected seed tubers. As yet blackleg has not caused much damage in Maine potato fields but it is thought to be on the increase. The chief danger from this disease lies in the fact that it causes much more serious losses in states farther south where Maine potatoes are largely purchased for seed purposes. If this trade is to be held, growers and shippers of seed potatoes should learn to recognize the disease and as far as possible ship for seed purposes from fields upon which it does not occur.

Anyone can learn to recognize the disease from the description which is given. It is thought that its distribution and spread can be easily controlled and methods for doing this are described in the Bulletin.

A copy of Bulletin 174 will be sent to any resident of Maine on request. Requests should be addressed to the Maine Agricultural Experiment Station, Orono, Maine. In writing please mention this paper.

Thousands? yes hundred of thousands of people throughout America are taking the slow death treatment daily. They are murdering their own stomach, the best friend they have, and in their sublime ignorance they think they are putting aside the laws of nature.

This is no sensational statement; it is a startling fact, the truth of which any honorable physician will not deny. These thousands of people are swallowing daily huge quantities of poison and other strong digesters, made especially to digest the food in the stomach without any aid at all from the digestive membrane of the stomach.

Millions of stomachs are relieved distressed stomach in five minutes; they do more. Taken regularly for a few weeks they build up the run down stomach and make it strong enough to digest its own food. Then indigestion, belching, sour stomach and headache will go.
